WEDNESDAY, OCT. 13, 1869.

How They Develop.

Mr. Walter Wells is doing a good work in describing the great water powers of Maine, as well as in calling the attention of our people to the manner in which they can be profitably developed. We have given one article in which he particularly explains the immense privileges of Washington and Hancock counties, and have reviewed his statements of other sections. That Maine lacks in railroad facilities to develop the majority of the best lands for agricultural purposes, as well as her manufacturing facilities, no one can doubt. That, where the facilities for communication are ample, Maine lacks in that spirit which invites large manufacturing establishments, is just beginning to dawn upon us. The experience of manufacturing communities at once teaches us this fact and the more interesting one that other places may profit by the same course of action.

The experience of Lewiston is a remarkable case in point. Mr. Wells says that if it had been proposed in the year 1850 that the town of Lewiston should invest $50,000 in the purchase of its water-power, with a view to placing the same at a reduced cost, or at no cost, in the hands of capitalists who contemplated improvements, doubtless the scheme would have met violent opposition, even if shown that the investment of millions of dollars within the town depended upon it. But the policy would have been a wise one for all that.

When the first company came to Lewiston, the land about the falls, with all the buildings and improvements thereon, was not worth over $60 an acre. Now single lots on the business streets, 25x90 ft, bring from $2,500 to $4,000. On Lisbon street, where good lots of the specified size sell for $1.75 per foot, a lot 88x114 ft, brought only $150 before the date of the improvements, or 1½ cts. per foot.

Mr. Wells continues:

"The rise has been constant. It has never fallen off. It is more rapid now than ever. A lot of land of six acres two years ago was bought for $6,000, one acre of it has already netted its owner $5,500 for house lots. The valuation of the town in 1850 was $625,000,—it is now about $6,000,000. Including Auburn, whose growth is equally the result of the use of the water-power, there is a population of 22,000 and taxable property, whose valuation is over $6,800,000, clustered about and grown up upon this great privilege,—a privilege not yet half developed.

"But the stimulus has been felt in all the region round about. There is not a piece of property within fifteen miles of Lewiston whose value has not been substantially raised by the improvements at that point. There is not a single element of human consumption, for food, clothing, building, or whatever produced within a half day's ride of the city, but sells quicker and at a price from twenty-five to one hundred per cent. more than it would but for the development of the water-power. Indeed but for the use of the power very much of it could not be sold or would not be produced at all. A farm ten miles distant from that city sold last spring for $8,300, which would not have commanded $5,000, if the manufactories had not been established at Lewiston.

"Results have demonstrated that if $100,000 worth of property had been given outright by Lewiston, or by Lewiston and the surrounding towns, each in the proportion of prospective advantage, to induce capitalists to invest upon the Androscoggin, a hundred dollars for every one thus invested would have come back to them; for the increase of property in the region consequent upon the improvement of the power is already more than $10,000,000."

Augusta offers another instance of the benefits to be derived from liberality towards manufacturing enterprise, although the full results are still prospective. The dam at that place was built thirty years ago, and in its day it was a great enterprise, absorbing all the capital that the community could invest in that direction. Ever since, this improvement has laid idle, thus allowing power enough to run to waste to carry 300,000 spindles. This was the situation of things when by the zeal and effort of some of her public-spirited citizens, the act of Jan. 15, 1867, was carried through the Legislature, authorizing the city to purchase the water-power with appurtenant property, and to transfer it upon such terms and to such persons as should be approved. The measure was endorsed by the citizens, not indeed without strenuous opposition, and $250,000 worth of property was transferred to the Spragues of Rhode Island, without cost or condition. The same act permitted the city to exempt from taxation to the year 1881, all improvements made upon the power.

Upon this, Mr. Wells thus proceeds:

"The legitimate results of this bold stroke are now beginning to be realized. The old cotton mill, completely remodelled, is to be started anew, Oct. 1st, with 12,000 spindles. The new mill, now building, will set 20,000 spindles in motion in a year. The third mill, for which preparations are making, will operate 60,000 spindles; the fourth 30,000 spindles; and in addition to these a great weaving-shop is to be erected, employing a large number of hands.

"Here is the equivalent of 130,000 spindles in immediate prospect! This means an annual product of about $8,000,000 in manufactures, an addition of 10,000 to the population, and a quadrupling of the general trade and business of the city. With this in the actual process of realization, it cannot be doubted that the city with its changed prospects, is already richer by one million of dollars in return for its investment of a quarter million."

Thus, Lewiston shows us what manufactories can do for the town, and Augusta shows us what the towns can do to encourage these enterprises. The manufacturing demands of the country are increasing with enormous rapidity. In the limited district of valuable water declivities, the progress in manufactures from 1850 to 1860 was 75 per cent., the product for those years being respectively $720,000,000 and $1,290,000,000! The product in 1875 will be at least $2,500,000,000, of which Maine ought to yield $200,000,000. Capitalist manufacturers will come here if they can meet a generous advance. Precisely what they want we are able to give, and it is all we have to give,—manufacturing privileges—privileges of little value as they are, and that always will be of little value, till touched by the hand of capital.

Shall our own communities (as they certainly can) receive their share of the benefits of the growing manufactories of the country? We believe that many of our towns appreciate this condition of things, and are bound to profit by it. Several have already offered to give their water-powers to any corporation that will build up manufactories. They can well afford to do it. They can do more than that. They can invite these foreign capitalists by offers of liberal treatment in exempting them from certain burdens till the property is in order to bring them returns; they can aid in building dams and by temporarily assuming responsibility that will soon turn to benefits. We have only to do half as much as others have done to secure vast benefits, and a word to the wise is sufficient.

THE PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO CAMPAIGNS. The Boston Journal's Washington special dispatch [illegible] says: Information received by [illegible] officials to-night from Pennsylvania and Ohio is most favorable for the Republicans [illegible] in both States. The campaign [illegible] conducted with great vigor on both [illegible] now that the Republican leader [illegible] early over the field, they confidently [illegible] the election of Geary in the one [illegible] of Hayes in the other; and the Re[illegible] hope for great gains in the city [illegible] Philadelphia, although the Mayor and [illegible] police force of the city is oper[illegible] against them. Secretary Boutwell's [illegible] admitted, had a great effect, not only in the city but also in the whole State, for it was telegraphed to all the papers, and [illegible], therefore, received a general perusal. The President, of course, takes much interest in the conflict, and is very anxious to [illegible] Republican success in both States.

The Boston Daily A[illegible] Philadelphia special dispatch of [illegible] there is comparatively very [illegible] over tomorrow's election. B[illegible] have been working quietly but [illegible]. The vote will not be as large [illegible], but it is generally acknowledged [illegible] will be very close. The majority [illegible] successful candidate will not exceed [illegible] Democratic State Central C[illegible] at upon 10,000 for Mr. Packer, while [illegible] Republicans say they are certain [illegible]. The city is looked upon wit[illegible] uncertainty as the State, [illegible] majority is claimed by both parties, [illegible] received by either party, will [illegible] decide the contest in the State. [illegible] issued special instructions to [illegible] warning them against any interference [illegible] pain of dismissal from the force. [illegible] it is said, will be in town pr[illegible] necessary, to aid the municipal au[illegible] preservation of order. Con[illegible] chance in some of the wards is [illegible] is now probable that the city t[illegible] nominated by the Democrats [illegible]. Handbills appeared today urging [illegible] Democrats in strong language, to v[illegible] origins ticket, and stating that [illegible] would be furnished at the poi[illegible] In some places these posters [illegible] down, causing serious disturbances.

Gen. Butterfield, [illegible] New York, it is now universal[illegible] in the street, was concerned in [illegible] movement in New York, and [illegible] heavy loser. It renders his pr[illegible] removal from office nobes [illegible] intimation is made of any [illegible] public money by Gen. Butterfield [illegible] public credit is too sensitive to [illegible] possibility of retaining a well [illegible] in the office now occupied [illegible] New York Sun, which is bitter [illegible] is forced to substantially [illegible] bring suspicion upon him.

"No evidence has be[illegible] which is incompatible with [illegible] innocence. It is not [illegible] established that any member [illegible] we mean any one nearer [illegible] law Corbin—was interes[illegible] likely that efforts were [illegible] President through [illegible]. The account said to have [illegible] the President himself of [illegible] Mr. Fisk on board the [illegible] the way for this belief [illegible] bribe if not spurned was [illegible] then calls upon A. T. S[illegible] his intimacy with Corbin [illegible] latter's statement that [illegible] (Stewart) would defend [illegible]

General Butler, while [illegible] Saturday, warmly defend[illegible] Grant and Secretary B[illegible] charges of complicity with [illegible] He says the slander [illegible] move set on foot by the D[illegible] to affect the approaching [illegible] Congress cannot pass any [illegible] would prevent gold gar[illegible] way to effect this object [illegible] greenbacks the standard [illegible] an article of merchandis[illegible] done if the government w[illegible] paper in partial payment [illegible] revenues.

THE COLORADO. Cap[illegible] well known at the West [illegible] made an exploration of t[illegible] during the past summer, [illegible] count of what he saw, as [illegible] Louis Republican, we quote:

"Along the whole length [illegible] are in constant view of [illegible] copper and lead. Many [illegible] traced back into the mo[illegible] and hang abruptly over [illegible] river. The scenery of the [illegible] have, Black, Long and P[illegible] the Upper Colorado is p[illegible] So different is this from [illegible] while descending through [illegible] captain almost doubted [illegible] Painted Canons so called [illegible] at each change of position [illegible] beauties were revealed. [illegible] striking resemblances was [illegible] ruined castles, fortificat[illegible] while here and there, h[illegible] heights a huge rock, appa[illegible] in the air and ready, at th[illegible] come crashing to the water [illegible] this the different strata of [illegible] tinctly defined as if fresh [illegible] a master painter, and the [illegible] signed. The ruins of cit[illegible] mines and canals, together [illegible] cations which yet stand [illegible] from their lofty position [illegible] he was but traveling in the [illegible] who had inhabited that sec[illegible] turies before the arrival of [illegible] Plymouth rock."

While America is wond[illegible] the new 'acoustic telegraph,' [illegible] French savant claims to have discov[illegible] thing as far beyond the old semi[illegible] E. This is nothing less than a moral telegraph, by which a child [illegible] inheritance of vicious dispositi[illegible] can be imbued with virtue [illegible] and studious habits. It is gravely [illegible] that this invention is to be test[illegible] of scientific men at Vannes. [illegible] imagination will perceive great [illegible] bilities in this discovery. Were it to come to fruition, the anxieties of parents would be at an end. The school teacher, instead of applying the birch, would send bad boys out to the reformatory telegraph office, sure that they would come back models of industry and deportment; prisons would be abolished; and every pulpit furnished with a telegraphic key-board communicating with the pews.

One ingenious correspondent tells us that the Hornet entered Wilmington from no lack of coal, but to make a test case of herself, expecting better treatment from our Government than from any other into the power of which she might happen to fall.—The intrinsic absurdity of this statement would cause it to be generally disbelieved were it not for the counter statement, which follows closely upon it, that the coal bunkers of the vessel have been examined and found to contain but ten tons of the vessel. Another report has it that several Spanish gunboats are waiting for the privateer at the entrance of the harbor, and still another, that the officers of the Hornet are contemplating a nocturnal flight. We presume that our Government will keep a firm hold on the vessel, and so nothing need be looked for to come from any of these predictions and conjectures.

Mr. Bonner drove his horse Dexter to sulky over the track at Prospect Park, Saturday, making the extraordinary time of half a mile in one minute and four seconds; the first quarter in thirty-three seconds, and the second in thirty-[illegible]. The track was dry, but rough. [illegible] never made a break, and never [illegible] after. This is the greatest time ever made by any horse.

Political and Personal.

Andrew Johnson's chief strength is said to be that he embodies more hatred of the Republican party and President Grant than anybody else in Tennessee.

Senator Morton said in his Cincinnati speech: "Except in regard to the war, slavery and reconstruction the Democratic party has no uniform status on any subject."

Leading men in California, together with Vice President Colfax and Senator Nye, have joined in congratulating the President upon his appropriate appointment of Governor Low to the Chinese mission.

General Alcorn, in his letter accepting the Republican nomination for Governor of Mississippi, says that the Democrats have, it is true, formed a Republican party in that State, but it is with the Republicans left out.

Robert Toombs continues dangerously ill at his residence in Washington, Ga., and but slight hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The New York World permits its correspondents to call the members of the Grand Army of the Republic—the men who fought for and saved the Union—"a set of scalawags."

The Congressional Committee to inquire into the causes of the decadence of American Commerce, of which Hon. John Lynch is chairman, met in New York yesterday.

The New York Republicans seem to have had bad luck with their State ticket. Mr. Curtis and General Robinson declined the nomination for Secretary of State, and Mr Hillhouse has now declined to be a candidate for Comptroller.

The Washington Chronicle of Saturday has a strong editorial criticizing severely those Republicans in Texas who support Hamilton for Governor, and says they must hereafter be reckoned among the enemies of the Republican party. It is confidently claimed that Davis is sure of being elected over both the other candidates.

Judge Dent's adulation of the colored voters of Mississippi is getting to be rather sickening. He acknowledged the other day that it was the misfortune to have been born a white man, adding this pathetic extenuation: "I have, however, full sympathy for you from being among you, and nursed by a colored woman, for whom I had the greatest affection. I shall always remember her with feelings of affection, as she guided my infant steps."

Gen. Phil Sheridan has accepted an invitation to be present at the dedication of a Soldiers' Monument at Claremont, N. H., Oct. 19th.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 12.

The weather is fine. The election is progressing finely and there is a prospect of a very full vote. Mr. Pendleton will take the entire Democratic strength. There are indications that the Republican, county and Legislative ticket will be elected in this city. There is much scratching and many vote for only half the candidates. The temperance ticket receives but few votes.

He lived about two hours.

Shortly after, Mr. Gray, depot master in Framingham was aroused, and going to the window was fired upon twice. Police Justice Adams of Framingham and another gentleman were also visited, but delayed appearing until the would-be assassin left. In the course of Governor Stevenson's speech he advocated the claims of Norfolk as a terminus for the ocean line of steamers. He also exhorted the Convention to see to it that the capital be not centralized in large cities at the whim of capitalists.

Blanton Duncan nominated Ex-President Fillmore as President of the Convention. The nomination was received with great applause and was unanimously adopted.

HON. JONAS CUTTING, Presiding.

Tuesday, Oct. 12th, 1869.

Lewis Reynolds vs. Inhabitants of Orrington. Action for damages sustained by plaintiff, caused by defect in highway. Defendants set up a want of knowledge of the defect on the part of the town if there was such a defect. Verdict for defendants.

Paine. Peters & Wilson.

Wm. F. Doe vs. Inhabitants of Levant. Action to recover damages to plaintiff caused by defect in highway. Defendants denied the existence of any defect or want of repair of which they had any knowledge. The case was committed to the Jury and Court adjourned.

A. Sanborn. C. P. Stetson.

THE STEAMER WM. TIBBETTS is being thoroughly repaired, and is therefore off the route this week. She will resume her regular trips, leaving her wharf here on Monday next at the usual hour.

—A fine shed is being erected on the wharf of steamer City of Richmond, which will be a great convenience to passengers as well as in the landing of freight.

—The fine weather we are having this fall is the subject of general remark—and deservingly so.

—A new house has been erected in the middle of Kenduskeag stream. It is on the draw pier of the Railroad bridge, and is for the use of the draw tender.

—Messrs. Stone & Daggett have recently removed from their store, corner, Main St. and West Market Square, to the new and elegant store immediately adjoining, which has been erected for them during the past season by Mr. J. P. Bass. With its broad front and elegant and costly windows, lofty walls and capacious depths, this is one of the finest stores for the dry goods trade in this part of the State, and with a fine stock of goods, and attentive and gentlemanly clerks, Messrs. Stone and Daggett will be better prepared than ever to wait upon their customers and the public.

POLICE COURT. Tuesday, Oct. 12th, 1869. Mary Conley was fined $1 and costs for an assault.

DROVERS IN LUCK. Messrs. Albert Bean and Edward H. Baker of this city, carried to Brighton on Friday last, a drove of twelve hundred Aroostook sheep, upon which they netted the handsome profit of $2300. The interruption to travel caused by the late gales, was the cause of the high prices received. It's an ill wind that blows no good.

CHOICE FRUIT. We have received from Mr. H. N. Darling of Patten, some of the finest varieties of apples we have ever examined. If Northern Penobscot and Aroostook can raise fruit equal to the sample sent us, there is no reason why they should not only raise apples for home consumption, but also for exportation.

BANGOR HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. At the annual meeting of this Society held on Monday evening last, the following were chosen officers for the ensuing year:

—Mr Nelson Young and wife of East Trenton, left home last Wednesday to visit his fish stand on Long Island, and when within three or four miles from the Island his boat was upset and they were drowned. Mrs. Young's body was picked up, but at the last account Mr Young's body was not found. They were esteemed citizens and leave no children.

—During the past summer, two men working in some woods adjacent to the line of the E. & P. R. R. heard the supposed cry or "hollering" of a moose. Thereupon, taking guns in hand, they commenced search and were not a little surprised to find the animal a full grown locomotive, making tracks up river with a gravel train on the line of the above Railroad.

—In an article much more suggestive of passion than pure regard for the public good, the Bangor Jeffersonian roundly abuses somebody wicked enough to publish the will of the late Hon. Rufus Dwinel, and as ridiculous as it may seem, in another column of the same paper, publishes that document entire.

—Some of the [illegible] say that Governor Chamberlain will [illegible] Pres. Harris of Bowdoin College, to the short U. S. Senatorial term.

—The correspondent [illegible] the Portland Argus speaks in the [illegible] terms of the Teacher's Institute at [illegible]

—The Star Match [illegible] in Portland, was burned Sunday. Loss estimated at $20,000. The Portland Press says it was owned by Manasseh [illegible] J. C. Jordan and Thomas E. Twit[illegible]. The origin of the fire is unknown.

—The Journal says that while Charles Hubbard, son of Sam'l A. Hubbard, Esq., of Biddeford, was out in the pasture after the cows, he came in contact with a vicious ram, belonging to Jacob Sutter, a neighbor of Mr. Hubbard's. The ram made a dive at the boy, knocking him down and breaking his arm near the [illegible] joint, and he was also severely hurt [about] the head and face.

—The Houlton T[imes] says the contract for building the Houlton Branch Railway has been duly signed [illegible] and delivered; and that work will [commence] almost immediately. Some of the leading men of that place, rather than lose the opportunity of railway connection with Aroostook, have stepped into the gap and assumed responsibilities which men possessed of less public spirit would have hesitated to do.

—The Farmington Chronicle says that the largest freshet ever known on the Sandy River, previous to the destructive one of the 4th inst., occurred Oct. 13th, 1855, when the water reached a mark six inches above that of Nov. 10th, 1845. The last one made a mark 6ft. 8 in. above them all.

—The Brunswick Telegraph says the body of a boy, supposed to be the French boy drowned there last spring, was on Tuesday found floating in the river just in front of the Poor House. It was much mutilated.

—The Farmington Chronicle says that Mr. Hutchins, tanner near Backus' Corner, reports a loss to him, by the freshet, of $800 in hides and bark.

—The Farmington Chronicle says there is but one occupant in Franklin County jail, and he does not belong in the county.

—The Ellsworth American says, that a Mrs. Wooster of Hancock had her ribs broken by a cow stepping on her. She was milking, when another cow hooked the one she was milking and that cow started and stepped on her.

—One of the most melancholy cases of mortality the Journal has heard of, is in the family of Mr. Lovewell Gooding of South Auburn. Within two years and ten months he has lost his wife and five children, all having died of consumption. But two are left out of seven children. Mr. Gooding's wife died about a week since and his son William S., aged 21 years, died Sunday night (10th inst) Two of these sons who have passed away, were in the army. Broken down by these recurring bereavements, Mr. Gooding fittingly receives the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community where he dwells.

—The horse Revenue, sold by Hon. Jesse S. Dyfeod, of Lewiston, to New York parties, is said to have made half a mile in private in the almost unprecedented time of 1:8. We understand that Revenue was sold for $13,500.

—Portland folks have to look sharp when stepping out of doors in the evening, lest they step upon some abandoned child. One about four weeks old was discovered upon the steps of one of their citizens on Sunday evening.

—Hon. George Downes, formerly Mayor of Calais, died in that city on Monday, in the 70th year of his age. He has been one of the most prominent men in that region for a long period.

—Within the city of Portland and a circuit of ten miles around it, there are about twenty brick yards, which produce about 20,000,000 bricks per year. They are all operated in the old fashioned way, except the steam works at Stroudwater. These works give employment to 30 hands and turn out about 33,000 bricks per day, which bring in Boston $2 per thousand more than common bricks.

—William H. Humphrey has been arrested in Lawrence, Mass., for forging the name of a person in Bath to a note for $60, which he had got cashed for $40.

—The dwelling house of Freedom Milliken of Scarboro' was entered by a burglar on Thursday night, and his pocket-book, containing fifty dollars was taken from his pantaloons which hung by the bed side. Mrs. Milliken's portmonnaie was also taken from her dress pocket, and fourteen dollars abstracted. Mr. Milliken's store was also entered and fourteen dollars was taken from the drawer; and the rogue got away with his booty.

—Mr. Joseph W Dyer of Portland while superintending repairs on a steamer at his shipyard in Cape Elizabeth Monday afternoon, was standing upon a staging when one of the workmen came along and the staging gave way, precipitating Mr Dyer quite a distance, wrenching his shoulder and bruising him quite badly.

VALUATION COMMISSIONERS. The following gentlemen have been nominated by the Governor and confirmed by the Council as Valuation Commissioners—John P Hubbard, Hiram; Seth Scammon, Scarboro'; Alvin Currier, Farmington; Nehemiah Smart, Searsmont, Abel Prescott, Canaan; R S Prescott, Bangor; Partman Houghton, Eastport.

—Rev. Mr. Martin of the Park Street, M. E. Church, Lewiston, on Sunday week baptized two and received thirteen persons into that Church. On last Sunday, twelve more persons were baptized and six received into the Church. Within seventeen months two hundred and sixty persons have been received on probation into this Church.

—Lewiston is suffering severely from sickness, typhoid fever being the prevailing disease. The Journal says:

"While people pass daily through the streets to and from business or pleasure, most of these little heed the fact that they cannot pass up or down any street without going by a house where death or suffering does not dwell. The extent to which typhoid fever prevails is unprecedented, and the malady seems rather on the increase than on the decrease. On Saturday we heard of several deaths; on Sunday, several more and daily many new cases are reported. The disease seems to rage more extensively in some quarters than in others. On high, well drained ground few if any cases are reported. Our physicians are at work night and day with hardly time for rest. It will require [illegible] November weather to put a [illegible] to the disease."

Inside View of the Gold Game

PERSONNEL OF THE LEADING GOLD GAMBLERS AND THEIR VICTIMS.

[From the New York Sunday Mercury.]

There is an inner life as well as an outer one. And this universal and well known law applies to Wall street operations and Wall street operators as well as to aught or anybody else. The recent whirlwind in gold has passed, and the tempest is subsided; and while the broader and more striking manifestations of the storm have been faithfully and fully reported in the columns, there yet remains somewhat of the secret history of the occasion, and much of the personnel of its chief actors, agents and victims which will be of public interest and will repay perusal. Let us, therefore, here and now put these branches of our subject in their due place on the record. And first, a few words as to the personnel, history and habits of the man whose name in Wall street is largely identified with the gold panic of September, 1869.

WILLIAM WOODWARD

In person Mr. W. is below medium stature—in short, in fact—and has heavy black whiskers and a prominent moustache. His age is forty-five years, but he has been known in Wall street less than eight years. He came to the street a man with no capital but assurance and shrewdness, and he has turned those qualities to such good [account] that he has made several fortunes and has failed several times. He has contrived, however, to do something not often [done] in the street—that is, to pay in full with interest his liabilities after every [illegible], and to be worth, after all his ups and downs, some $6,000,000. In habits Mr. W. is very quiet, and dresses neatly, though in subdued taste. He is very charitable, [illegible] in his transactions with his fellow brokers, and has recently given over half a million dollars to a church in Brooklyn, where he resides with his large family. He never drinks, but smokes all day and all night long.

AN ENGLISH FINANCIER [illegible] AMERICAN PACIFIC.

Among the venerable names of the gold mania of 1869 is that of R. Waller, who does business in the name of his [illegible] wife [illegible] Waller. Mr. Waller is a member of the St. George's Cricket Club, and is a thorough John Bull on a small scale. He believes that cricket is worth a dozen base balls, and that the Americans are slow. But the [illegible] on the street during the past few days have opened Waller's eyes to American finance, and he is a sadder, [illegible] wiser, and a poorer man. For some [illegible] past he has attempted to be one of the [illegible] of the Stock Board. He will now [illegible] probably abide.

A. SPEYER—THE MONKEY [illegible]

[illegible] a lager beer brewery, there flourished [illegible] a Teuton [illegible] A. Speyer. Becoming [illegible] a government broker, [illegible] in the favor of the government [illegible] good [illegible] Belden, [illegible] Young [illegible] to enter the gold pool at the instance of his principal, bid wildly for gold at 150, when it was selling way down below that figure, [illegible] thereby a temporary reaction in the market, was [illegible] by Fisk, [illegible] the ground, it may be a true one, [illegible] instructions, and finally [illegible] combined [illegible] the enormous weight of [illegible] obligations. Mr. Speyer is rather advanced in years, is tall and thin, [illegible] eyed, [illegible] and weak voiced, and has a considerable degree of pity in his trouble.

THE GREAT GOLD [illegible]—SMITH, GOULD AND MARTIN.

H. N. Smith formerly kept an exchange office in Buffalo, and, from all accounts had a pretty rough time of it. In person he is short, with red hair and whiskers. He is de[scribed] by his intimates as a [illegible] man who has [gone] crazy on horses. He paid, recently, $17,000 for a horse called [illegible] $7,000 [for] a mare called [illegible]. Altogether, at times he has invested about $200,000 in horse flesh. He is a smart fellow, but occasionally [gets] bitten, though he prefers to bite.

Jay Gould is sufficiently well known as the President of the Erie railroad, and as the brains of James Fisk, Jr., who simply executes his plans, and whose [illegible] bears to [illegible] the same relation which the head does to the trunk. Apropos, it is currently reported that Gould has wearied somewhat of his fat and eccentric follower and it was freely stated on the street that during the panic Gould [illegible] expressed himself to the effect "that a greater calamity might easily happen to the country than the death of James Fisk."

Martin, the junior partner of the gold gambling firm, is known to his intimates by the nickname of the "Spider," which domestic creature he somewhat resembles in general style of walk and manner. He is a capital "inside" or office man, and invaluable machine, but is considered as knowing next to nothing of the movements of the streets. Like Toodles's crutches, he is handy to have in the house.

DAKIN, GILLESPIE & CO., A FIRM OF THE PERIOD.

This [illegible] spunky firm, Gillespie says he has not failed, is not failing, and does not intend to fail. He claims that he paid out Friday night to his creditors several millions of dollars, on behalf of himself, and his principals did not cease paying till after midnight, and intends to keep on paying till there are no more who are entitled to be paid. Gillespie is a nervous, delicate blonde, with mild eyes and light side whiskers, is slow of speech, free and easy in manner, and is hail fellow well met with all the world. He is a married man with two little Gillespies to take care of, and he takes care of them well.

Dakin is a religious broker, quiet and timid, who seldom goes out in the street alone, but minds things at the office and the church like a good boy, and leaves all outside matters to Gillespie.

BELDEN, THE BROKER.

One of the heroes of the solid sample of 1869 is the broker, Belden. This personage is a decided character in his way, and a pretty large way at that. He started as cashier with Maitland, Phelps & Co., and soon learned all that they could teach him. He then came into Wall street with S. A. Mills, acting also in the capacity of confidential clerk and cashier; and finally started in life on his own account at the expense of Billy Dornin, who advanced him his initial money. In due time Belden rose and Dornin went to the wall. Mr. Belden is a pale, high cheeked, high stooped man, with the most utter immobility of heart and countenance—nothing has ever been new to him, and, probably nothing ever will.

His motto is simple, and is that of ninety-nine men out of a hundred, though few have the candor to express it openly—"Look out for number one;" and in business he has no friends, and wishes none. In a pure matter of business he trusts no one, and suspects all.

Also 16,000 Acres of Land in the Town of Byron Oxford Co.,

Also 1100 Acres Timber and Wood Land in Town of Gorham, N. H.,

Logs put into Crooked river can be run to Sebago, or by hauling four to five miles they can be put into the Saco. There is a good mill privilege, with a single saw mill on the tract; distance to the canal at Harrison ten miles; to the railroad at South Paris twelve miles. The land is valuable for settling purposes after being cleared of timber.
Also 485 Shares of Stock in the Lewiston Steam Mill Company, the whole capital stock being represented by 627 shares. The property of the company consists of a Steam Saw Mill, capable of manufacturing five million feet of long lumber, with a proportionate amount of clapboards, shingles and laths. About fifteen acres land in the city of Lewiston, well located for building purposes, and thirty thousand acres of timber land, well located on the Androscoggin river and its branches, from which but a small quantity of the timber has been cut.

SARAH'S HONEY-BEES.

Bell Bixby had been gone from the city a week when I had my disappointment about Cape May. There was quite a party of us who were going, but it was all broken up because our chaperons failed us; and now with midsummer close at hand, the city heat growing intolerable, and my trunk already packed for a start, I was not absolutely aimless, nowhere to go. So I wrote to Belle, and in two days had her answer.

'Do come down here with me,' she wrote 'it's despertately lonely, and I'm dying for the sight of a friend. There is actually nothing to do, and no one to speak to; so you can fancy my state of mind. Otherwise the air is lovely, the scenery perfect, and it is a funny little old humdrum village. Just such as you like. I've spoken to Aunt Em about it, and you need not bring any fine dresses, for you won't wear them. I just keep in my camisole from morning till night, and hunt, 'Ah,' non giunge,' and stare at the roses. Eat bread and milk, and go to bed at half-past eight. Just the thing for you. There, dear, so come, and get recruited.'

I decided that I should like it; so I unpacked my trunk, putting in fewer dresses and more books, thinking Belle and I could read to each other under the trees; and just an hour from the date of her letter the old yellow stage coach left me at the farmhouse gate. It was a great, comfortable-looking house, painted red, with butternut trees in front, and lilac and rose bushes.

And there was Belle running down the path to meet me, while a handsome, stalwart young man stood on the door looking after her. Camisoles and simplicity, indeed! Belle's hair was crimped and puffed three inches high, and she had on her white alpaca and turquoises. Belle was blonde, and she always looked prettiest in white and blue. She kissed me on both cheeks, and then danced a little waltz ahead of me as I walked up the path with my traveling-bag. A moment more and she introduced Mr. Brooks to me.

'My new friend, Phone. Latest but not least,' she said with a coquettish air; and the gentleman bowing made a few pleasant remarks about my journey, then, with the excuse that he was sure we would wish to be alone together, he made us good-afternoon and departed.

I caught Belle's hands and made her look straight in my eyes.

'What mischief are you in now, dear?' I asked.

'Oh, don't!' she cried, laughing, 'don't you think he's nice? I call him Corydon; and now don't you begin to flirt with him, boys, for he's my especial property!'

'Hum!' said I, 'I wonder what Archie Russell would say?'

'I haven't accepted Archie yet,' said Belle defiantly; 'and who knows but what I should like to live in the country after all? Don't you think, Corydon has fine eyes, Phone? but may be you didn't notice.'

'No, I didn't' I answered, a little shortly, quick to foresee that Belle and I were not to have such long, indolent, dreamy talks and readings under the trees as I had imagined. For flirtations put every thing out of time.

But Belle only laughed, and led me off up stairs to the large pleasant east chamber that we were to occupy together. She flew around in her most winsome way, helped me off with my cumbersome dress, seated me down in a little rocking chair, and taking down my hair began to brush it for me in an old school-girl fashion, while she chattered about all the city news.

By-and-by her Aunt Em came in to see me and made me welcome. She was a nice old lady, with shrewd, honest eyes, and I liked her in a moment.

'Where's Sarah?' asked Belle.

'Old Sarah's out watching the bees,' said Aunt Em. 'We've expecting every minute when they'll begin to swarm. And I must go right away to see after the milk; so you won't see me again 'till supper's ready.'

And away she went, full of housewifery cares.

'Your cousin Sarah?' I asked, vaguely remembering that I had heard a cousin Sarah mentioned some time or other.

'Yes,' said Belle. 'All the rest of Aunt Em's daughters are married, all but Sarah.'

'Is she nice and pretty?' I asked, with some curiosity.

'Why I don't know,' said Belle, laughing carelessly. 'Yes, Sarah is good, very good in her way. She's as much as twenty-five years old; going to be an old maid, you know; and she's good and quiet in her little way, and she makes the butter and watches the bees. That's all there is about Sarah. Have you seen Archie Russell since I came away, and did he ask about me?'

So we went back to our city gossip, and only finished when the call to supper was heard. Such a supper! such bread and butter! such fruit, and cream and honey! while Aunt Em kept up a little friendly talk about her Aldernays and her currant jelly, and Sarah, with a pre-occupied air, said she was glad the new hives had been sent up from the store that afternoon. I liked Sarah; she looked so gentle, so little self-asserting; it seemed as if she had grown up in her way of life as naturally and contentedly as the lilac bushes in theirs, and as firmly rooted. Going to be an old maid!

'Come,' said Belle, springing up from the table—'come, Phone, and put some roses in my hair, for Corydon will be here this evening—I almost know he will.'

So we went out in the front porch, while Sarah and her mother cleared the table and washed up the dishes.

'How did you get acquainted with Mr. Brooks, Belle?' I asked, as I fastened a pink bud in her light puffs.

'Why, you know I wrote you there was nobody here to speak to,' she answered, gayly; 'and I felt like wasted sweetness, and so lonesome! And wasn't it queer he came to call on Aunt Em the very day after I sent my letter. I suppose he heard somehow of my being here. He was away on business all the week before, so couldn't come sooner, he said. And now he has been here four times, and I think he's plentiful. He isn't very easy to flirt with, because he's so honest, I suppose; but I mean to have him dead in love with me before I go home.'

'And what then?' I asked. 'I should think you'd be tired of getting yourself in scrapes, Belle.'

She began to sing, 'Oh, I won't be a nun' and went to the door looking down the path. What a clear, old-fashioned place it was! A five-forever grew on each side of the steps, and a bush of southern-wood the other. There were cinnamon roses along the fence, and the clover grew rich and lush all over the yard.

'He's coming,' whispered Belle, and Mr. Brooks walked rapidly down the road, apparently with no intention of stopping, till Belle called and asked him if he wasn't coming in.

'I was going to the village; but this is pleasanter,' he said opening the little gate and coming up to us. 'Miss Bennett, I hope you have pleasant news from your father here. How are your aunt and cousin, Miss Risley? I have not seen them to-day.'

'Oh, they are out in the kitchen,' said Belle, raising her smiling blue eyes to his. 'It's lovely here at this hour, Mr. Brooks? Every day after tea I come here to watch for the evening-star. See! there it is now, just over those clouds. Isn't Venus beautiful?'

Mr. Brooks seemed to think that Venus was beautiful, and sitting down by us he expounded quite ready to join to Belle's lively chatter and quick repartees. But it occurred to me that he was not quite so susceptible as Belle thought.

'Some of Sarah's honey-bees,' I said, At that moment Sarah herself came through the narrow entry, and sat down among us with her knitting. She was a quiet bit of a background for Belle's brilliancy; only when any of us said any thing witty, she laughed as if she enjoyed it.

The sun went down, and the moonlight came instead, shutting white on the silver elms and willows.

'I am going,' said Mr. Brooks, and he rose. 'May I take you to ride on horseback, to-morrow, young ladies? Don't you think your cousins would like it, Sarah?'

'Yes, indeed,' she said; 'and it is such a pleasant road to the cliff yet.'

'Very well,' he replied; 'I know your two horses are good under the saddle; and I will bring my Brown Jo for the third. You had better take Brownie, Sarah,' he added to you. And now I really must be going away. Good-night, all.'

And off he went. We prepared to get into the house.

He did not give me time to answer,' said Sarah, in her quiet way; 'but I have no idea that I shall be able to go with you to-morrow. And you shall ride Brownie, Phone; he is just the horse for you.'

'You're a good amiable little thing, Cousin Sade!' exclaimed Belle, joyously; 'that is just what I wanted. Oh, how I shall enjoy riding with my handsome Corydon! I promise she not to interfere, Phone.'

Sarah gathered up her work silently, and went into the keeping-room, where her mother sat. But Belle and I went up stairs and had a comfortable talk.

'I like your cousin Sarah, Belle,' I said as she is such a harmonious person; she don't jar on any one's feelings.'

'Oh, no, of course not,' said Belle; 'Sarah is a good little thing, and I have quite an affection for her. But she is gray. Do you know what I mean? Some people seem gray all the way through—all a monotone—as much a key—no warmth, no sparkle in them; a nice thing to take hold of, Sarah is that way. I never think about Sarah—it is only any thing to think about in her.

And Belle was right. Sarah's shining blue eyes, and ruddy ripples in waves all down her shoulders, drawn up and dandled about the room like a baby, had escaped Belle's notice.

'I feel as if I should like to shake her,' she exclaimed, stopping before the glass and cheeks rosy-red. 'And I'm tired, and I'm going to bed,' I replied, for I was more the after-fatigue of travelling.

The next day was lovely, but I still felt tired and out of sorts. It seemed to me that I had a strange horse that day who would be lame; and I told Belle I would stay at home if she did not mind.

'No, dear, I can't mind,' she said, gayly. 'Corydon and I will have a good time all by ourselves.'

Corydon came riding up to the gate presently, leading a lady's horse by the bridle, and Belle came out to greet him, then flew up stairs to put on her pretty blue riding-habit.

'But where are the other horses?' asked Mr. Brooks, when I had apprised.

'Oh, Sarah is not going,' I said. 'She has to watch the bees, and I am not well enough to ride to-day, so I shall keep her company.'

Mr. Brooks actually bit his lip, and looked gloomy.

A PACIFIC RAILWAY

GOLD LOAN

We beg leave to announce that the [illegible] has been appointed Agent for the sale of the Kansas Pacific Railway Co.

New Seven Per Cent

Thirty Year Gold Loan, [illegible]

The Loan amounts to $6,500,000.

First Mortgage Land-Grant & Sinking Fund Bonds

secured upon the extension of the road from Sheridan, in Kansas, to the [illegible] distance of 237 miles, of which [illegible] and the rest is under construction. Mortgage upon the Road, Equipments, Franchise of this first-class Railway running through the state of Kansas.

And in Successful Operation for 377 Miles

West of the Missouri River, and earning enough to meet all of its expenses and [illegible] besides.

More than the Interest upon the Bonds

In addition to this the Bonds are a first mortgage of the extending in alternate sections on each side of the track from the 39th mile post in Kansas to the 237th mile post in Colorado. The proceeds of the sale of these lands are to be invested by the Trustee in the Bonds themselves up to 20 per cent of the U. S. Loan.

A Sinking Fund for the Redemption of the Bonds.

The lands embrace some of the richest portions of the magnificent territory of Colorado, and are rapidly being settled and planted. The Company has already sold an [illegible] another tract of and although not pledged as a part of this Loan, their possession adds largely to the Company's wealth and credit. We estimate the Value of the Company's Property covered by this Mortgage, at $23,000,000 net, while the Loan is merely $6,500,000.

The Bonds have

THIRTY YEARS TO RUN,

From May 1, 1869, and will pay

Seven per cent. Interest in Gold,

Semi-annually, on May 1 and Nov. 1, and are Free from Government Taxation.

The Company pay for the tax.

The PRINCIPAL of the Loan is made payable in Gold, in the City of New York, but either coupon will be at option of the holder, without notice, at the following rates:

Payable in Frankfort, London or New York

On $1,000 Bond in New York, $35 (gold) each half year.

On $1,000 Bond in London, £7 3s. 7d. each half year.

On $1,000 Bond in Frankfort, 70 florins, each half year.

The Agents of the Loan, before accepting the trust, had the condition of the Road and the country through which it runs, carefully examined. They are happy to give the Loan their entire endorsement as a

FIRST CLASS INVESTMENT,

In every respect perfectly sure, and in some essentials even Better than Government Securities.

The Bonds will be sold for the present at 96, and accrued interest, both in Currency,

The Agents reserving the right to advance the price.

The attention of investors is invited to the well secured bonds, which we recommend as one of the most profitable investments in the market.

Gold and Government Securities taken in payment at their market value, without commissions. Pamphlets, with maps giving full information, sent on application.
